Seen & Heard Around Murray

Bill Ferguson is one of the best salesmen we have ever known.

He jumps into the coaching business (football variety) last year, comes up with a good season and literally sells folks on the idea that the Racers can go.

Last week we get a letter from Bill (along with about a 1000 other folks) pointing out how important support for the Racers is. By golly this person to person contact will do the job. Makes us wonder if Bill didn't major in psychology.

Now comes some definitions which we stole from the Fulton Daily Leader which in turn picked them up from the Publisher's Auxiliary, and so on and so forth.

Says the Publisher's Auxiliary — In these news-saturated times when much of our information originates with "experts," "special committees," "official spokesmen," etc., you need a phrasebook to interpret the obscure language of certain pronouncements.

To aid in this direction, they carried the following "translations" of some familiar instances of gobbledegook:

"The committee met and evaluated the situation." (Half the members showed up and talked for a while).

"We explored every conceivable solution to the problem." (Everybody talked a lot but nothing was said).

"The results were inconclusive." (Nothing was accomplished).

"It is widely accepted that..." (One other person agrees with me).

"Therefore the consensus is..." (A couple of others think so...).

"It is hoped that this report will stimulate increased interest in the problem." (Next time let somebody else do it).

"Federal Money is Phony Money, because there is no such thing." So goes the headline in a Warner & Swasey advertisement.

The ad goes on to say, "The Federal government produces nothing to earn money. It has nothing it does not take from you, who earn it by your production or your savings."

Governor Wallace Dies This Morning

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — Gov. Lurleen Wallace, a former dimwit clerk who rode her husband's popularity into the Alabama governor's office as his successor, died today after a long fight against cancer.

The blonde 41-year-old mother of four, Alabama's first woman governor, died in the governor's mansion at 1:34 a. m. (EDT). Her husband, George Wallace, whom she succeeded as governor to further his third-party presidential aspirations, was at her side.

Remove Pictures
Before dawn porters began moving boxes of files and pictures out of Gov. Wallace's office at the capitol. Flags were raised to half staff at dawn and radio stations broadcast funeral arrangements of "Dixie."

Her body will be moved to the capitol in a funeral procession Wednesday morning.

It was to be removed Thursday afternoon for 2 p. m. services at St. James Methodist Church, with burial at Greenwood Cemetery in Montgomery.

Twin-States Murray Team Wins Sunday

The Murray Twin State team won their second game in as many outings for the young season as they defeated the West Kentucky Vocational team 11 to 10, at Paducah yesterday.

Charles Archer was Murray's first pitcher and was given credit for the win. Tony Thomas relieved in the fourth, pitched three innings, and was pulled out in the seventh and replaced by McGhee, who lasted less than an inning as Richie Tidwell was called on to put out the fire.

Bobby Campbell started the game behind the plate, and finished the game catching all four Murray pitchers.

West Kentucky Vocational used two pitchers and two catchers. L. Engrin started on the mound and was relieved in the sixth by Bradford. The two catchers were Watkins and Bruse, who came in in the eighth.

Eddie Young picked up three hits for Murray. Richard Edwards had two, and Jimmy Felts had two, including a homer.

Murray pitchers struck out 18 batters.

Murray's next game is with Sheppards Service next Sunday at Brooks Stadium at Paducah.

American League Pitchers Become Batters This Season

By VITO STELLINO
UPI Sports Writer

Connie Mack—among others—is supposed to have said that pitching is 75 to 80 per cent of baseball.

But now he'd probably have to say it's more like 99 and 44 100ths per cent of the game.

The pitchers are so far ahead of the hitters that the game is becoming a low-scoring, pitch-and-catch game like a fast-pitch softball.

That was the story in the American League Monday night as the pitchers had another night that's becoming typical of this season.

Just nine days after teammate Tom Phoebus pitched a no-hitter, Dave Leonard threw a one-hitter to give the Baltimore Orioles a 4-0 victory over the Detroit Tigers. Meanwhile, Sam McDowell was breaking Bob Feller's record for strikeouts in consecutive games in Cleveland's 9-2 victory over the New York Yankees.

Routine Three-Hitter
Almost in the routine category was Tommy John's three-hitter as the Chicago White Sox edged the California Angels 5-1. And seven pitchers paraded to the mound for both teams and the hitters were futile against all of them as the Oakland A's edged the Minnesota Twins 2-1.

Bringing back memories of the days when the hitters used to be the story of the game was Mickey Mantle, who tagged McDowell for the 522nd homer of his career to take over sole possession of fourth place on the all-time list.

But the rest of the league was a pitching story.

Leonard had a no-hitter for 6 2/3 innings when Detroit's Jim Northrup lined a single for the Tigers' only hit. The shut-out was the first of his career for Leonard, who's 24 this season for his only two major league decisions. The Orioles are now 2 1/2 games ahead of the Tigers in the American League race.

McDowell struck out 14 Yankees—after fanning 16 on May 1 against Oakland—to give him a two-game total of 30. The pitcher also won his own game with a two-run single off Mel Stottlemyre that capped a three-run rally in the fourth inning and gave Cleveland the triumph.

Mantle's homer came in the first inning with one on and one out and enabled him to surpass Ted Williams' mark of 521. Jimmy Fox at 534 is his next barrier to third place on the "all-time list," which probably will be his pinnacle since Willie Mays and Babe Ruth are out of reach.

Wins Third Game
Tommy John was in command all the way as he set down the Angels on three hits to give the White Sox their sixth victory this season. John, 34, has won half of them.

Bubba Morton homered off John in the second for the Angels' only run but rookie Bill Melton hit a bases-loaded two-run single in the fourth to put the White Sox ahead to stay.

Reggie Jackson's fourth-inning homer snapped a 1-1 tie in the fourth and five pitchers made it stand up as the A's topped the Twins.

Jim Nash had a six-hitter going into the seventh inning when he aggravated a hamstring muscle pull. Four more pitchers, Ed Sprague, Paul Lindblad, Diego Segui and Tony Pierce, paraded to the mound but the Twins only got one more hit in the game. Segui retired Ron Clark with the bases loaded in the eighth to quell the Twins' only serious rally. The Twins, usually a good hitting team, have just 15 hits in their last four games.

Dean Chance pitched for six innings and took the loss although he gave up just three hits.

More Room

Sports Parade

By MILTON RICHMAN
UPI Sports Writer

NEW YORK — An empty ball park can be a spooky place.

It doesn't really matter where it's located, either. An empty ball park is cold and cheerless whether it's situated in San Francisco, San Luis Potosi or San Jose.

This particular one was in Boston. Fenway Park. The Red Sox weren't due to start the game until 8 p. m. Monday because they had a night game scheduled with the Twins so it was particularly deserted when Tony Conigliaro got there around noon.

The 23-year-old outfielder, whose baseball career could be ended because of a permanently damaged left eye, walked into the Red Sox clubhouse where he saw Darrell Johnson, the pitching coach.

Conigliaro and Johnson spoke briefly. Mostly small talk. Later, Conigliaro took a whirl pool treatment and returned to his home in Swampscott, Mass.

While all this was going on another man was concerning himself about Conigliaro 22 miles away.

Eckert Takes Action
The man was William D. Eckert, commissioner of baseball. He concerned himself in his office here in New York and he did something many people claim he should do more often. He took a stand.

Without bothering to sound out any of the American League clubs Eckert broke precedent and created a special category for Conigliaro. That doesn't sound like much to do for a young fellow in danger of losing the sight of one eye but a lot was involved.

The Red Sox had previously announced they would pay Conigliaro's salary for the entire year. That comes to $60,000.

Ordinarily, Conigliaro would be placed on the voluntary retired list but Eckert didn't want that because the outfielder has only four years time in the majors, a minimum of five is needed to become a vested member in the Players' Pension Plan and Conigliaro may never have a chance to get that one more year in.

Had Tony been placed on the regular disabled list, he still would have counted against the Red Sox' 40-man roster. That would have meant Boston would have had to go through the season with one less player than the other nine American League clubs.

So Eckert simply up and created this new category. He called it the "special emergency disabled list" and that's the one Conigliaro was officially placed on Monday.

Pension Credit
That means Tony will collect his full salary, he will receive credit for that one year he needs for his pension, and his presence on the list, where his name stands all alone, will not be charged against the Red Sox' 40-man roster.

"He didn't ask us and we naturally have no objections," said one AL official, commenting on Eckert's move, "but he took quite a bit on himself. We don't mind him taking the bull by the horns sometimes as long as he's consistent about it."

Back at his home in Swampscott, Tony Conigliaro said he was "grateful" for what Eckert and the Red Sox had done.

What about the vision in his left eye?

"Not good," Conigliaro muttered. "It looks like it's in two months."

What was he doing for recreation?

"I can't do anything active and I can't read, either, because it strains the eye," he said.

The conversation got around to last August's beating by Jack Hamilton and how much he enjoyed the California pitcher has shown since then. How did Conigliaro feel about that now?

"No comment," he said.

Tony Conigliaro sounded lonely. Extremely low. Here was a 23-year-old young man automatically qualifying for his pension and collecting a year's salary that it was obvious he wasn't happy. He wasn't happy at all.

"How can I be?" said Tony Conigliaro.

Coach's Lot
In Russia
MOSCOW (UPI) — A 59-year-old Soviet track coach who fell out with the directors of the school which hired him wound up jobless, and living in a dingy attic without a regular water supply, according to a Soviet newspaper.

"The coach did not train us a single champion in five years," the daily Komsomolskaya Pravda quoted an authority at the school. "Why should we be humane to him? We have to see what he is giving to society, and so far it hasn't amounted to anything."

Rockne Rewritten
NEW YORK (UPI) — This may be the slack season for most professional football players, but it's even "slacker" for Ernie Koy and Henry Carr of the New York Giants.

The two Giant backs are working for a company that produces zippers for men's slacks (Scovill). And, according to Koy, the boss, already has paraded a paragraph from football history (shades of Knute Rockne) by exhorting them to "go out there and win one for the old zipper."

Warning About Warming

DETROIT—Pitcher Denny McLain of the Detroit Tigers is the man in the middle, trapped between umpires Larry Napp, left, and Al Salerno, right. The gestures are threatening but the warning is actually mild. They are telling the hurler not to blow on his hands to warm them during 45-degree weather, because the new spitball rule forbids bringing hand to mouth.

Pete Rose Of Cincinnati Now Batting Average Leader

By FRED DOWN
UPI Sports Writer

There's just no doubt that it's a pitchers' year in baseball when a guy batting .404 complains about the pitching. But that's Pete Rose, the Cincinnati Reds all over.

Ros, who things he's in a slump when he goes 0-for-4, extended his hitting streak to 21 straight games and kept his National League-leading average at .404 with a homer and a double Monday night as the Cincinnati Reds routed the Philadelphia Phillies 10-1.

"I was too anxious my first three times up," said Rose, explaining why he didn't hit safely until his fourth try. "And I'm surprised the streak has gone this far. It's almost impossible to have a long streak unless you're lucky because the pitching is so good all around the league."

Culver Takes Win
Tommy Helms, Johnny Bench and Alex Johnson each collected three hits in the Reds' 15-hit attack on four Philadelphia pitchers enabling George Culver to breeze to his first victory.

The victory moved the Reds into sole possession of second place, 2 1/2 games behind the St. Louis Cardinals.

The Cardinals nipped the New York Mets 2-1 in 11 innings, the Pittsburgh Pirates edged the Atlanta Braves 2-1 and the Houston Astros routed the San Francisco Giants 10-2 in other NL games.

In the American League, the Baltimore Orioles defeated the Detroit Tigers 4-0, the Cleveland Indians beat the New York Yankees 3-2, the Oakland A's edged the Minnesota Twins 2-1 and the Chicago White Sox whipped the California Angels 5-1.

Extra Inning Victory
Orlando Cepeda, the NL's most valuable player in 1967, singled home Lou Brock with the bases filled and none out to give the Cardinals their 11th-inning victory over the Mets.

Calloway And Murray Teams Both Advance To Semi-finals

Calloway County and Murray High Schools both advanced to the semi-finals in the fourth district baseball tournament, yesterday.

The Lakers defeated the Benton Indians 9-1, and the Tigers defeated the South Marshall Rebels 3-2, in the second game of the afternoon.

Stan Key was the winning pitcher for the Lakers as he fanned 13 batters and allowed only four hits and the one run. Mike Ernestberger made a couple of catches that were almost sure hits to help his teammate out.

Duane Adams, catcher for the Lakers went three for four in the Lakers' hitting. Collecting two hits each were Steve Ernestberger, Tony Jones, and Ronnie Hargrove.

Ernestberger had a triple and a double to his credit, and one of Jones' hits was a home run. Allan Grogan was on the mound for the Tigers, going the distance and striking out 10 on the way to the victory.

Jimmy Branson, Trip Williams, and Johnny Williams each collected two hits out of three trips to the plate. Charles Clark hit a triple.

Calloway is scheduled to play North Marshall in the first game this afternoon and Murray will play University School in the second game.

Live below your means.

If you'd like to get around the high cost of living, we have a suggestion: Cut down on the high cost of getting around.

And buy a Volkswagen. It's only $1,877.75. That's around $1200 less than the average amount paid for a new car today. (Leave it in the bank. More's coming.) A VW saves you hundreds of dollars on upkeep over the years. It takes pints, not quarts, of oil. Not one iota of antifreeze.

And it gets about 27 miles to the gallon. The average car (thirsty devil that it is) only gets 14.

So the more you drive, the more you save.

And chances are, you'll drive it for years and years. (Since we never change the style, a VW never goes out of style.) Of course, a VW's not much to look at. So a lot of people buy a big flashy car just to save face.

Try putting that in the bank.

by UNIVERSITY OF KENTUCKY Area Extension Agents Adult Work

The challenge of keeping a family well dressed on a modest clothing budget can be one of the most difficult homemaking problems. But it can be done. The University of Kentucky Extension Service bulletin, "Clothing Dollars and Sense," gives valuable suggestions to the clothing dollar.

Instead of shopping on a sporadic, unorganized basis, list completely the clothing each family member has and decide what is needed.

Planning is one of the keys to being correctly and attractively dressed. The more limited the income, the more careful the planning must be, because you cannot afford to make a mistake.

Choose basic clothing that you can expect to wear for several seasons, some that can be worn for most any occasion with a change of accessories, and in colors that blend. Be a good shopper. Do not buy all major items the same year, but be sure those you do buy go well with what you have. Look for good workmanship, quality and fit. Stick to your plans when you go shopping. — Catherine C. Thompson.

If grease stains show up after wash-and-wear garments are washed, it means they weren't pretreated. Pretreat grease stains on wash-and-wear and permanent press garments with a liquid heavy duty detergent. Rub the detergent into the dampened spot and soak a few minutes before washing. Garments made from the polyester fabric have an affinity for grease. Pretreat the neckline which will collect oils from the body. Remember that you need to wash these fabrics often. — Mrs. Barletta Wraether.

How should the knife and fork be used in cutting food? Hold the knife in the left hand, the fork in the right, the index finger extending along the handle to steady and guide the knife or fork. The knife blade should not be stuck between the tines of the fork. Cut enough meat or other food for one or two bites at a time. — Miss Patricia Everett.

Space-saving furniture can be the answer to furnishing problems for those who have small houses or apartments. Some furniture can help one room do the work of two or three; for example, the living room can be changed easily to a dining room or guest room if a certain type of furniture is used. Three types of space-saving furniture are available.

First, is the furniture which has thin lines and little bulk. When this type is used, the furniture needed for comfort can fit into a small room without giving an over crowded look. Another kind of space-saving furniture takes up little floor space yet does a big job. For example, from some cabinets you can pull an extension din-

Work in 4-H is carried out under the guidance of adult leaders. They receive training in working with people and in subject matter and skills from the agents and specialists who are staff members of the University of Kentucky's Cooperative Extension Service. — Mrs. Dean Roper.

Have a good home filing system. Many families are determined to "get better organized" especially when income tax time draws near. The modern family today needs to keep other financial family and personal records up-to-date and in an organized manner.

Setting up a home business center with a well kept filing system can simplify the mechanics of running a family business.

Your home file should have information about personal documents like birth and marriage certificates, service records or other copies of documents themselves. Information on social security numbers, employment records, insurance policies, mortgage payments, etc. should be in a home file. Some "paper possessions" especially negotiable securities are safer in a safety deposit box than at home. Could your family find all the papers necessary in case of an emergency? Extension Home Economics has a leaflet, "Family Records," H-E-5136, which will help you keep a record of family valuable papers, etc. — Miss Irma Hamilton.

The bread and cereal group of the basic four food groups includes enriched and whole grain products. Foods in this group furnish worthwhile amounts of proteins, iron, several of the B vitamins, and food energy. Choose 4 servings or more daily. Count as one serving: 1 slice of bread; 1/2 cup cooked cereal; 1/2 cup cooked pasta; 1/2 cup macaroni, noodles, rice, or spaghetti. Other foods in this group include grits, crackers, rolled oats, and quick breads and other baked goods if made with whole-grain or enriched flour. — Miss Frances Hanes.

High Excitement All the Way AS GOOD AS GOLD By Edward Wymark

From the Coward-McCann, Inc. novel. Copyright, 1967, Edward Wymark. Distributed by King Features Syndicate.

WHAT HAS HAPPENED: After learning a fellow pilot and friend, Tony Motors, had been arrested in Calcutta for smuggling gold into India, Nicholas Verreker was visited in London by Moty's wife Olga, who told him her husband had 3,000 pounds in a secret bank account. Verreker, about his association with Moty.

CHAPTER 19: FOO PAY LING and I walked around the room and Nicholas Vandervell followed. While Foo Pay Ling showed me ornaments, the antiquity of which varied from three thousand years to just the other day.

"It's extraordinary how political situations are reflected in the culture of any period," Foo Pay Ling explained. "The plain green and brown lead glazes of the Han period for instance are reflected in the later Tang period. The beauty and refinement of this epoch characterizes the new and fertile atmosphere existing in China after the break-up of the ancient empire."

Proudly he showed me small bowls and plates and wine ewers and gave them to me for my uninformed examination. Some of them which he handled I considered plain and dull and inelegant. In others I could share his enthusiasm.

We left the room for a few minutes and upstairs in a small, red sitting-room he showed me a jade horse of the fourteenth century.

"My latest acquisition," he said. I admired the exquisitely carved and almost animate limbs of the small horse. Then I said it was time for me to go. Meeting Foo and Vandervell on the same night had been a little overpowering.

"You must come and see my paintings in the New Territories next time you come to Hong Kong," Foo Pay Ling said when I thanked him for the party.

"If you really must go so soon I'll take you across to Kowloon in my boat," Nicholas said. "The ferry will have stopped by now. The boat's not far from Blake Pier. Have lunch with me tomorrow at the Regina and we can finish our little talk."

As I was going out I found that I left my cigarette case upstairs. I remembered putting it down when Foo Pay Ling showed me the jade horse. I would have asked the boy to collect it, but he was in the driveway so I went back upstairs myself and as it happened I went into the wrong room. Just as I was retreating my eye was caught by a photograph of a beautiful, European girl on which was written "To Foo Pay Ling, Cannes 1964." The photograph was in a small silver frame on a chest-of-drawers in what was obviously a dressing-room.

Nearly grotesquely larger and destroying the simplicity of the other's effect was a leather-framed photographic portrait of a bullfighting Chinese in battle dress. His head was posed and chin elevated, his shoulders were squared and his eyes gazed into the room with a frightening lack of expression. This too was inscribed in ink, but in Chinese. I paused to stare stupidly at the unintelligible papyrus-like symbols.

The man in the photograph was Mao Tse-tung in the uniform of General of the Chinese Peoples' Republic.

The party last night had left me with strange impressions. They were mixed, varied, disturbing. Nicholas had seemed so intensely deliberately peculiar, so very keen for me to meet Foo Pay Ling and extraordinarily unsurprised when I said I was going to marry his sister. Then there was Foo Pay Ling himself, and above all there was that photograph.

I ordered another drink, and as I was paying for it, Nicholas Vandervell limped through the door. When he came up I remembered how he had told me he wanted to live in China. Perhaps one day he would be a friend of Chou En-lai and Mao Tse-tung too, and I wondered if he would go so far as to have pictures of them in his dressing-room like Foo Pay Ling had.

"I hope you enjoyed the party last night," he said.

"Very much. Was it all right, my going?"

"Of course. What did you think of Foo?" He didn't wait for me to reply and went into another description of Foo Pay Ling's treasure house in the New Territories. Nicholas concluded, "commercially, culturally and politically he's so astonishingly flexible. This is the sort of man who is capable of helping to bring to fruition a new China which is only embryonic at the moment."

To Foo Pay Ling and his ilk, Vandervell would devote his whole mind and what seemed to be an astonishingly fierce nature. After a discussion of Camilla, I told him I must leave. "Perhaps you'll come up to the New Territories on your next trip," he said. "Then I'll show you Foo's collection. He'd be delighted. As you heard last night, I look after it for him. Fascinating."

Somehow I thought the New Territories seemed awfully close to the barbed-wire frontier posts and the tentacles of Communism; that sort of barrier had become so temporary and so much more menacing since its conception in the days of Clemenceau.

As we walked out Nicholas suddenly put his arm on my shoulder. "Well," he said, "I suppose you will be getting married in England." He paused and continued rather sadly, "I seem to know so few people there now and most of them are just business people. I still have one great friend, an old man called Jacobsen but I fear he is almost a recluse now. He only emerges to delve in the British Museum and that is very rarely because he's frightened of trains." He laughed and went on, "And I don't suppose you know my only other real friend of the past... Crane—Ludo Crane?"

"Crane? No, I don't think so."

"Knew him during the halcyon days of my youth. Actually I've a couple of vases for him at the moment. Just and barely removed from Benares brassware. Not even worth the cost of air-freighting it. I suppose it would be an awful bore for you to take them?"

"Well," I said reluctantly, viewing the prospect of lugging brassware on and off an aeroplane at each stop. "We're not actually supposed to do that sort of thing."

"Look, I don't want to be a trouble, but I thought that if you wouldn't mind, the fellow would have them near Christmas."

"It's a bit awkward because as I say, it's not really permitted unless the things are for our personal use, besides the Customs are pretty hot at the moment. Still I don't mind if it's only brassware..."

"Wonderful of you. There's another thing too; anticipating the worst, and since you're on the spot, I have decided to give you a wedding present now."

"Most awfully good of you," I murmured.

"I think you'll like it," he said. "I mean after all you'll need pictures for your flat, and I distrust Camilla's taste in eastern art; so I've sent round to your hotel a small painting I found in Tokyo. It's all packed up and should travel all right."

I thanked him, genuinely grateful for what would undoubtedly be something of good taste.

ALMANAC

by United Press International

Today is Tuesday, May 7, the 128th day of 1968 with 238 to follow.

The moon is between the first quarter and the full phase. The morning stars are Saturn and Venus.

The evening star is Jupiter.

On this day in history:

In 1915, the British liner "Lusitania" was sunk off Ireland by a German U-boat. The vessel sank in 22 minutes with the loss of almost 1,200 passengers, including 124 Americans.

In 1945, Germany surrendered at Rheims, France.

In 1954, the French forces surrendered at their fortress of Dienbienphu, causing their withdrawal from what is now Vietnam.

In 1964, an airliner crashed 40 miles east of San Francisco, killing all 44 persons aboard. The FBI indicated that the pilot had been shot.

A thought for the day—Scottish historian Thomas Carlyle said, "No man who has once heartily and wholly laughed can be irreclaimably bad."

Coach Larimer, a former Murray State competitor himself, said that the team's success was a result of hard work by each individual. "While this year's team was the best in Murray State's history," he continued, "next year's team promises to be even better."

SEEN & HEARD

Then the government spends your money after first paying the two million "handlers" of your dollars — the government employees. But — you say — "these big Federal bureaus and their projects are really paid for by the rich". Get out your income tax report for last year, compare it with what you paid ten years ago, and see who pays. YOU. Remember that, when somebody promises you something "free" — it's Federal money. It's yours.

This is a difficult idea to get across, however it is true. Every dime the Federal government spends must of a necessity come to it from taxpayers. The less the government spends, the less income taxes will be. It is just that simple.

We turn from this frustrating problem to the old Tree Frog who lives in the Post Oak in the back yard. He has moved. Last year he was in the front yard in the Hard Head Hickory.

He gives out occasionally with a sleepy croak. When this occurs in the heat of the day when there is no wind, it seems to make everything dryer and hotter.

There is just something about that croak which seems to take all his energy and add to the druggy atmosphere. There is another aspect however, a 2-3 this is that when you hear this sleepy pronunciation, you know that all is well with the world. He only speaks when everything is absolutely quiet and no hint of danger is in the wind.

A small Bull Frog squirming under the sand stone in the flower bed. We saw him but he thought he got away "un-noticed."
